

Catalina

Document type

- Character

Status

- Active/Alive

Basic information

Sex

- Female

Age

- 27

Height

- 5' 10"

Species/Races

- Tabaxi

Occupation/Class

- Rouge (Level 7)
- Thief
- Fighter (Level 2)

Place of origin

- Xairo

Description & History

History

Chapter 1: The City of Xairo

In the bustling capital city of Xairo, situated within the proud Kingdom of Zastria, a minority race known as the Tabaxi has long found itself struggling against prejudice and indifference. Among these mystifying feline humanoids, a particular family has produced two siblings of notable repute – Catalina and Bramblepelt. The city, dominated by Aasimar, a race of celestial beings, offered an unforgiving environment for the two young Tabaxi.

Chapter 2: Sibling Bonds

Catalina was always a restless and rebellious soul, her chaotic evil nature in stark contrast to Bramblepelt's temperance and virtue. While Bramblepelt found solace in philosophical pursuits, Catalina's interests lay in the shadows of Xairo, where schemes and mischief abounded. Their parents' attempts to guide her into more productive paths failed, leading her to a life of crime.

Chapter 3: The Criminal Underbelly

Catalina's association with Xairo's criminal world began under the tutelage of Silvertail, a one-eyed Tabaxi rogue. He saw her potential and initiated her into a secret society of thieves. This decision embedded her in a world of larceny, betrayal, and intrigue, where she flourished as a rogue and master of deception.

Chapter 4: A Fraying Bond

As Catalina embraced her darker nature, the rift between her and Bramblepelt widened. The once close siblings found themselves torn apart by their contrasting ideologies and life choices. Bramblepelt's horror at Catalina's descent and her growing infamy within the criminal network marked the fracture of their relationship.

Chapter 5: Success and Infamy

Catalina's criminal exploits ranged from stealing precious artifacts to infiltrating the houses of the city's most powerful Aasimar nobles. Her name became synonymous with audacity and treachery. Yet, despite her success, a nagging void lingered within her, hinting at a distant memory of familial warmth or something deeper.

Chapter 6: A Path Obscured

Catalina's tale is a study in contrasts, mirroring the dichotomy between light and shadow, morality and depravity. In the Kingdom of Zastria's capital, where Tabaxis are a minority, her story stands as a testament to the complex tapestry of choices and consequences. Her journey's end, whether in redemption or chaos, is a tale yet unwritten, guided by her whims and relentless pursuit of power.

Description

Catalina, the Tabaxi Rogue, is a figure of graceful menace, her feline features accentuated by an enigmatic expression. Her eyes, sharp and calculating, are a vibrant shade of emerald green that seems to pierce through the shadows. Her fur is a sleek blend of deep charcoal and sable, with faint stripes and spots lending an air of wild elegance.

Her build is lithe and athletic, embodying the agility and stealth that are her trade's hallmark. A long, expressive tail adds to her cat-like grace, often flicking or curling in response to her mood. Her claws, though usually retracted, are razor-sharp and ready to be employed when needed.

Catalina's attire is functional yet stylish, a blend of dark, form-fitting fabrics that allow her to move with ease and silence. Her clothes bear the subtle marks of her thieving exploits, with hidden pockets and cleverly concealed tools of her trade. Draped around her shoulders, she often wears the Cloak of Elvenkind, its magical properties enhancing her natural prowess in stealth.

Her face bears a small scar, a remnant of a past conflict, and her ears are adorned with delicate silver rings, tokens from her various escapades. Her hair is short and wild, often pushed back to keep from obstructing her view.

Whether in a crowded marketplace or a shadowed alley, Catalina moves with a predator's confidence, her every step measured and purposeful. Her presence is one of silent charisma, drawing attention and curiosity, yet always hinting at the hidden depths and secrets that define her chaotic, criminal existence. Her aura speaks of adventure, danger, and the tantalizing thrill of the unknown.

Skills, Stats, Knowledge & Characteristics

Equipment/Owned Items

- Radiant Shortsword (Magical)
- Cloak of Elvenkind (Magical)
- +1 Silver Rapier of Lightning (Magical)

Wealth/Owned Currencies

- Gold (55)

Known Languages

- Common
- Celestial

- Thieves' Cant

Relationships

Other relatives of the Character

- Bramblepelt (Brother)